Preface

The importance of scientific publishing that illuminated the path of science and scientific researchers and provided many benefits and services to humankind and those interested, and if research is the door to progress and development, then scientific publishing is the key to this topic, and scientific conferences are among the most important means of scientific publishing that played a major role in creating the appropriate atmosphere and securing academic meetings And research that brings together activists of the scientific community to present and discuss the best they have reached and present it in the interest of society and serve its future. From this standpoint comes the idea of the International Scientific Conference for Postgraduate Students in Linguistic Studies to provide the opportunity to publish the research of graduate students, and to benefit from their professors for guidance, amendment and evaluation of their work. On the sidelines of the conference, some scientific workshops will be held to determine the correct approach to scientific research.
